

Lonny Eugene Carlson

May 6, 1957 - June 25, 2020

He was also a Deacon at Hindsville Baptist Church. His life centered around building relationships with strangers, which is to say, building relationships with friends.

“ Pam,

We just found out about Lon; we are so sorry for your loss.

Lon was my best man in my wedding in 1977. We became friends in Western Bible College. We played basketball together, we had long Christian talks, and grew remarkably close. In between my freshman and sophomore year I went to live with Lon's family as I worked at the grain elevators in his hometown. His family adopted me as one of their own and I saw firsthand how Lon had grown up in a Christian home with Godly parents. It was a great summer!! After I got married and joined the Air Force, they stationed me at the Air Force Academy. Lon and Pam moved to Colorado and Lon found a job in Colorado Springs, Colorado. It was great times and great memories of playing games, hanging out, going to church, and having long talks together. I know Lon is with Jesus and someday I will see you again in heaven with Jesus.

Lon touched so many lives as a friend and a witness for Jesus.

“ Lon and I met in 1978 in Jackson Michigan at NTBI over a ping pong game. He remembered that I was beating some girl, so he came to her aid...I have never really been sure of that story. But we became the best of friends and Jackson would not have been the same without Lon. He had two nice cars while we were there - I had a piece of junk. After NTBI we went different directions, but we stayed in touch. He and Pam married, and I married. Our family visited Springdale over the years - their 4 kids and our 4 kids – but not often enough. Mostly we stayed in touch by phone. When we talked it was as if we were never apart. Lon was kind, gracious, encouraging...as many have said, Lon was a good example of a Christian man. And we are better off for knowing Lon and him having been in our lives. God was glorified in Lon's life in many, many ways and that is how each of our lives should be. To Pam and the family, your loss is great today, but keep those memories going like was talked about at the cemetery. May the Lord bless each of you. Tim & Esther Meisel

“ My Uncle Lon was a great man. I have so many memories. The 4 that mean the most to me though are:
(Not in this order)

He taught me how to shoot a gun, and took me hunting when I had no one else who cared to show me such things growing up.

He taught me how to work on a car when I was 20 years old because again growing up I had no one to teach me such things.

He almost got into a fist fight with my abusive ex-step-Father Bill defending me, literally at church on a Sunday, the very church which his memorial service will be.

If I had to say that out of everyone he was the one that really truly taught me the deeper things about respect without just requiring it while I was growing up it was him. Looking back he also taught me about integrity and truly loving even those who did him wrong or got under his skin. I wish I would have held onto those things at a much younger age.

Uncle Lon was a man who cared like no other. He was a ray of light in a dark world. He would teach me hard lessons that no one else would because he knew I needed them when everyone else just felt sorry for me because of the trauma I went through as a child, and yet he did it in a loving way every time. Without looking back on his life and our relationship these past few days I don't know if I would have ever realized how much of a father he tried to be to me in the such limited times we had together.

Processing this loss is proving to be much more, much harder, and much more bittersweet than I could have ever imagined. All along through the turmoil God had tried to give me those who could were such examples of His love when I thought I could have no love.

Uncle Lon was a lot of things, a teacher, a friend to anyone, a father, etc etc but most of all Uncle Lon was an example of the love of Jesus.
