“ Alli was the sweet girl who sat at lunch with the shy, frizzy haired, nerdy girl with glasses and braces the first week of 6th grade that sparked a more than 2 decade long friendship. It's impossible to name one specific moment or story that resonates the most for me when I think of her and all the years we've shared. From her melting in the early summer heat on the blacktop at Fuller, complaining that Ohio was so much nicer that time of year, to me daring her to eat a hot cheeto for the first time and her swearing I was the devil for it not having any effect on me the way it did her. She had the best sleepovers at her place with long hours jumping and laying on her trampoline talking and laughing about everything under the sun, listening to music, watching To Wong Foo or Napoleon Dynamite, eating pizza that was definitely left out all night and her insisting that little debby cakes were a staple food group on her vegetarian journey. She loved the theater and her performances at the school plays were always my favorite. She had an enormous personality that made everyone who knew her love her like the precious light that she was. She was there for me through the worst times of my life and some of the happiest. I could always count on her when I needed her and I can only hope she felt that recipricated. She was so kind and so smart and she was truly like a sister to me. It still isn't real to me that such a beautiful soul is gone from this earth so soon.
