“ It was after services on a weekday at Kona Gospel Chapel in Kealahou Hawaii, where Tim was the Pentecostal Pastor. A handful of us from the congregation were up on the stage between Tim’s podium and Sonja’s piano, learning a new song Sonja had written for the next Sunday service. When we were pau (finished in Hawaiian), Sonja got up from the piano, slowly stretched in satisfaction and joined us for a circle of prayer to bless our time for Jesus. It was 1979 and Sonja was looking especially lovely with her hair and makeup just so. As she took my hand I said, “You are looking so good Sonja. Your eyes are so beautiful.” She turned her head, slowly rolled her eyes in that way she does & drawled “They say I have bedroom eyes.” We all broke into laughter, as she held her pose. It was so good to be there happy together, so at home, in the house of the Lord.

“ I didn't know her that well. I met her at church in Winslow, Ar. Always enjoyed being around her. Listening to her sing and her testimony. God bless all of the families and friends.
